
Being hated in the UK (or everywhere?)

1 message

Mohini Hersom <spaniel.golden@gmail.com>

Sun, Mar 1, 2026 at 11:25 PM

To: md sufian <mdabusufian@yahoo.com>, alex mcdowell <alexmcdowell26@hotmail.com>

Dear Mr Abu

I have to make sure of things. Alex raised this question and I brought it to you.

I feel more comfortable if I know what is happening. It is not a sign of mistrusting the solicitor.

. Many lawyers acted against me in the immigration matter by trying to put me forward as a mental case and nothing more, with a partner and Alex (who put in money) wanted to go along with them because he thought they would deliver the goods. The UKBA warn constantly about lie-detectors. Maybe I ticked a checkbox on their lie detector list because UKBA knows someone of my education does not use mental services.. The lawyers wanted me labelled as mental because that was the most reliable way to make me lose my case.

Wanting to understand is not like I feel you won't do a good job.

I am nor an evil person and do not mind if you make a mistake from your side..I am sure such things can be rectified and you know what to do

Alex is however the expert on Uk culture, not me.

Next time I or Alex have a question I will ask Alex to address them to you.

Sorry for my communications. Let Alex do all the communicating

Respectfully

Mohini